Wukong curled up in bed.
In his dreams,
the path was smooth.
And the wheels whispered,
"Shhh..."

Wukong's Wibble-Wobble Ride

"Look at them go!"
Wukong's tail went BOING!
"I want to ride, too!"

At home, he parked his bike.
"Goodnight, wheels."
"Goodnight, wobbles."

Now they rode together.
No rush.
Just happy wheels.

Wukong put on his helmet.
"Ready!"
"Um... it's backward!"
Wukong giggled.
"Let's try again!"

He pushed with his feet.
Scoot. Scoot. Scoot.
"Look! A monkey scooter!"

He learned to turn.
He learned to stop.
Just before a puddle.
"After you, little duck."

"I'm doing it!"
His scarf fluttered.
His tail made a loop.
Even his ears felt proud.

Feet up…
Wibble! Wobble!
PLOP!
"Hello, grass."

"Maybe the bell will help."
Ding! Ding!
The bell worked.
The wobble stayed.

Then, one evening...
Pigsy let go.
Wukong kept going!

He tried a little every day.
Some rides were short.
Some were wobbly.
He kept trying.

Pigsy held the seat.
"Eyes ahead. Nice and slow."
Rabbit cheered.
"You can do it!"

Wukong tried again.
One push.
One pedal.
Two.

He wobbled left.
His tail wobbled right.
"My tail is learning, too!"
